At the Opera House Last Night an Unqualified Artistic Success.

A FINE PROGRAMME PRESENTED.

Outside Talent Combines with Home Performers to Produce a Magnificent Evening's Entertainment--Programme that was Rendered.

Every downstairs seat in the Opera House was engaged and occupied last night, and several rows of seats in the balcony were also full. The managers of the charity concert for the benefit of the Home for Aged and Friendless Women were well pleased with the receipts accruing from the concert. A splendid programme had been prepared, and was carried out almost to the letter. Unfortunately, and to the regret of many, Mr. R. V. Arkle, who was on the programme for a tenor solo, Rossini's "Cujus Animam," was seriously indisposed and under medical treatment, and consequently was unable to be pres-and consequently was unable to be present.

The concert opened with Suppe's concert overture, which was rendered by the Opera House orchestra in its accustomed perfect style. The vocal duett, "The Crucifix," by Faure, was well sung by Mr. W. B. Day, tenor, and Mr. Charles Zulauf, who have sung often at similar entertainments, but are always heard with pleasure.

An innovation was the instrumental trio, consisting of harp, zither and piano, played respectively by Miss Anna Lang and Messrs. Thayer and Sporleder. Selections from the opera of the "Poet and Peasant" were rendered. Great skill was displayed by each performer, and the same perfect execution, on a more suitable combination of instruments, would have made a more agreeable production.

Miss Bankard, a member of the quartette choir of a prominent Pittsburgh church, same "Lend Me. Your Aid," a a more agrecable production.

Miss Bankard, a member of the quartette choir of a prominent Pittsburgh church, sang "Lend Me Your Aid," a composition of the celebrated composer Gounod. Miss Bankard's voice is of thrilling effect, and her performance was well received by the audience.

Mr. Harding, a noted basso from Baltimore, was on the programme for Meyerbeer's "Thou by all Nations Adored." He was in good voice and the difficult composition was smoothly rendered. Miss Houser, of Cadiz, Ohio, played remarkably well Liezt's arrangement for the piano of the opera "Rigolletto," and was followed by Mrs. Nellie Sweeney-Palmer in "Love's Eternity," by Rotali.

The second part of the entertainment was opened by the Crescent Banjo, Mandolin and Guitar club. Mr. W. B. Day gained his usual laurels in Buck's "Creole Lover's" song. Mrs. Whitaker, in Roseini's "Una Voce Poco fa," received liberal applause, and Miss Anna Long, in a selection played on the harp, carried the audience with her. Mr. Harding was again heard with pleasure in Ruberstein's "Yearnings." and Prot.

Shockey rendered a cavatina and Schu-mann's "Traeumerei" on the violin. mann's "Traeumerei" on the violin. Prof. Shockey's excellence on his favorite instrument is well known, and his performance last night was fully up to his standard. Mattei's "Sailor's Prayer" was next sung by Mrs. Lee, and Mr. Ott followed in a pathetic recitation. The Opera House orchestra closed the evening's entertainment with selections from "Martha."

The concert was over in good time.

The concert was over in good time, but the notice at the foot of the programme that positively no encores would be allowed was responsible for the timely closing. The financial success of the evening's entertainment was rescaled. especially pleasing to the ladies that had worked so hard to make it a success. A Supper to the Singers.

After the concert Mr. F. W. Baumer tendered those who took part an elegant supper at the Fort Henry club. The bill of lare was up to the standard of the Fort Henry cuisine, and was very much enjoyed by all. After this had been done full justice to several fine songs were rendered. Mr. Harding sang the "Bedouin Love Song," Mrs. Whitaker Schumann's "Two Grenadiers," and Miss Houser gave a selection from Rubenstein. Mr. Day sang "The Broken Ring," and Mrs. Palmer "Dear Heart," and Mr. Sporleder played "A Siren Waltz." Miss Bankard sang "Best of All," Mrs. Lee "The Maid of Dundee," Mr. Harding "The Arrow and the Song," and Mr. Harding and Mr. Day the "Excelsior" duett. The Banjo, Mandolin and Guitar club played two selections, and altogether the supper was a memorable affair. the supper was a memorable affair.

THE HOSPITAL FAIR.

All that is Left to be Sold at Auction this Evening, the last,

The festival for the benefit of the Wheeling hospital, at the Busby building, has so far proven a very marked success. To night will be the last. The admittance is reduced to fifteen cents, and everything points to a grand night.

The drawing will close for good then and the lucky be rewarded. Tables are constantly being replenished, and will show up the last night, if possible, more beautiful than on all the five preceding it.

show up the last night, it possible, more beautiful than on all the five preceding it.

The hall last night was radiant in beauty, a fairy-land indeed, and in the brilliancy of gas and electricity was a scene of rare beauty, equaling the brightest description of the "Arabian Knights." The meal table is up to the mark in every regard, and the expense to visitors very low.

The booth of rich and rare articles called after Father McElligott, with its array of talent and beauty, will to-night make a general distribution of all its wealth at what things bring at auction. From this booth was drawn last night the beautiful doll clothed in blue, by Capt. McDonnell; the next by Miss Gertie O'Neil, and one by Mr. Lewis Helmbright.

Dr. Pipes drew the magnificent fire rug. A fine line of valuable pictures belong here, Persian lamps, handpainted article and the "Angelus," in oil, by Miss Tillie Reilly; "A Bunch of Roses," in oil, by Miss Bertha Zerelle, and a thousand and one other things of value and beauty are to go under the hammer.

A SINGLE SIXPENCE.

A SINGLE SIXPENCE.

He was out of a situation, and he counseled with himself as to whether he would stand two pence for a bun for supper and four pence for his lodging, or whether he would spend the sixpence in going to the theatre. This was before he had gone on the stage. He saw the performance; it was "Romeo and Juliet." and that decided him upon his future profession. During the first year following, his wardrobe was limited and he often went hungry. She claims that through all their ups and downs their domestic life was exemplary until there began to appear caustic paragraphs commenting on Mr. Mantell's conduct with a pretty young member of his company. Mrs. Mantell says that she considered how great and numerous were the temptations, until now, when she says, forbearance has ceased to be a virtue and time has arrived for action. rived for action.

ceased to be a virtue and time has arrived for action.

Mantell met his wife previous to going on the stage, and they were married when very young. He was not a great success as an actor in his first endeavor, although he traveled through the English provinces filling the most romantic parts in Shakespeare's dramas. He came to this country in a minor role, his wife being a walking lady in the same company. She did not possess any marked abilities, and never has been able to rise above the commonest and briefest talking characters. Mr. Mantell was with "The Lights of London" and similar productions when Fanny Davenport discovered him, and secured him for Loris Alpahoff in "Fedora." He was a brilliant aid to her, and after two seasons with her and after two seasons with her BICAME A STAR Of the first light. The third season he left Miss Davenport and starred under the Frohman management in "Called Back." His wife was given a leading role, but was a poor success, as was the whole undertaking. The next year he went out under Gus Pitou's reign, and for two years enjoyed rare success. This and last year he was for himself.

The couple have had four children—two boys living. It is told among theatrical people that Mrs. Mantell, who is not a very comely woman, has been very jealous of her handsome husband, and especially since he has become a star their marital life has been a tempestuous one. In his favor it is told that, while he is not a fond admirer of women, he has of late years been unable to withstand their charms and has not been the beau ideal of husbands. The twain have separated once or twice within the past four years, but have been united again through friends and their two children. Mr. Mantell formerly turned over all his letters and presents from the numerous lady admirers that were his in every city he visited, and his wife would frequently parade the latter in the parts that sie took, but later she claimed that he was not as attentive as of old, and was devoted to other ladies, and the consequence has been numerous rows, which have finally ended in a separation. #### DIAMONDS IN WHEELING,

A Talk on the Pretty Stones with a man who Knows about them.

It is strange what a fascination there is in the subject of diamonds for people who never expect to own one of the beautiful stones. The history of diamonds, the description of the famous ones, the value and anything that pertains to them is read or discussed with the most absorbing interest. Yesterday an Intellegence reporter was conversing with Mr. J. W. Grubb, the well known jeweler, when the subject of diamonds came up, and the reporter asked if there was much demand for diamonds in Wheeling. "Oh, yes;" said Mr. Grubb, "and it is growing every season. Of course the most activity is to be noted about the holiday times, but we have more or less trade running all through the year. It is strange what ideas some people have about diamonds. They probably get their notions from the advertisements of irresponsible dealers. There is a lifetime study in the subject of diamonds, and the only way any person not an experts can get a really satisfactory bargain is to go to a responsible and well known dealer and take his word for what you get."

Mr. Grubb has a reputation in the castern markets for being one of the keenest-eyed and best judges of diamonds in the country. He has made a special study of the subject, and is consulted by all well posted people in this vicinity who want to purchase diamonds. When asked as to the prosones, the value and anything that persulted by all well posted people in this vicinity who want to purchase diamonds. When asked as to the prospect that diamonds would become cheaper in the near luture, he showed the reporter a paper printed in the interest of the jewelry trade, which has letters from every prominent diamond market in Europe and this country, showing that the stones are very firm, and that there is not any liability of a decrease in the next few years, if at all.
